Definitions

Retrospective adverse utilization review determination appeal: a determination by a utilization review agent that a health care service that has been provided is medically necessary. A provider has their own right to appeal a retrospective adverse determination rendered by a utilization review agent. This only applies to the Commercial and State lines of business. These appeals should be sent to Benefit Administration.

Provider appealing on behalf of the member: an appeal request where the provider is appealing on behalf of the member. The initial denial includes but is not limited to an Initial Adverse Determination, Notice of Denial of Medical Coverage, Notice of Denial of Payment, Notice of Denial of Medicare Part D Drug Coverage, or Explanation of Benefits. Reference the applicable appeal policy for written authorization requirements by line of business. These appeals should be sent to Benefit Administration.

Post-service payment dispute where the member is not at financial risk: participating provider disputing a claim denial or incorrect reimbursement amounts (except where that pertains to previously established fee schedules or other such fee arrangements that are negotiated pursuant to the provider's participating agreement) where the provider is responsible and the member is not at financial risk.

Administrative sanction appeal: appeal regarding financial sanctions imposed against a provider for violation of contract or policy, rule, regulation, or process. These appeals should be sent to Benefit Administration.
